"People who like to avoid shocking discoveries, who prefer to believe that society is just what they were taught in Sunday School, who like the safety of the rules, the maxims of what Alfred Schutz has called the world-taken-for-granted, should stay away from sociology"

Peter Berger, Invitation of Sociology

Ancestry: Who Do You Think They Were?

We are the dreams of our grandparents.

Sociology teaches, especially with C. Wright Mill's concept of the sociological imagination, that a great deal of whom people are is the result of their interactions and socializations. The goal of this homework is to apply the ideas of sociology to everyday experiences and appreciate the practical information that sociology provides.

Students will produce an at least 1200 word social biography of the ancestor for which they have enough information and wish to study.

Due Thursday, December 6, 2018, before 8:30 AM

There are no late papers accepted unless there is an extreme, unavoidable, and unforeseeable emergency which is at the discretion of the teacher to accept as a valid reason and will result in an incomplete grade issued for the class. Students must inform the teacher of any problems before the due date and time. Students should keep a copy of the homework for their own records and perhaps to help with future ancestral research. Paper versions may be turned in at the start of class December 6, 2018, or emailed before class. Please put your name and CLC email on the paper. Grades and suggestions will be emailed.

The Biography

Students are asked to produce an at least 1200 word social biography about the earliest ancestor on their family tree for which they have the most information. The 1200 words are in addition to the works cited page, your name, and any supplemental, although not required, documents or pictures. Please submit only photocopies of documents and pictures, not originals. The social biography should discuss facts about the person's experiences and how those experiences influenced him or her, the family history, and the community and society. Provide context to the biography: what was happening historically or culturally during the era you are writing about? How did those contexts affect your ancestor and family history? Which events and people influenced your ancestor? What influence did your ancestor have on the family's history?

You do not need to provide the real name of the person you are writing about if you do not wish. You could refer to them as my grandparent or my great grandmother. You could refer to the person generically as an ancestor or create a fake name if preferred to completely hide their identity. If you are interviewing living relatives, be certain to ask them for permission to tell about their experiences and use their names in your paper. Other than name changes, all other information in the biography should be factual. There should also be a works cited page listing any sources, documents, interviews, or texts utilized to write the biography. Please include your name on the first page of the biography. A good source for how to cite is The Owl at Purdue which has an MLA and APA guide available. <https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/>

Suggestions

We are also going to have many examples and suggestions during class to help with the research.

- ✓ Ask or interview members of your family. For example, your grandparents may remember their grandparents, which would be your great great grandparents
- ✓ Use Internet programs and websites such as FamilySearch.org which is free or Ancestry.com which is free at most local libraries
- ✓ Use newspapers and Internet search engines
- ✓ Contact groups or organizations to which your ancestors belonged
- ✓ Plus many more fun ways to research we will discuss during lectures

The Best Papers

- ✓ Utilize proper grammar and are at least 1200 words
- ✓ Include a works cited page of interviews and documents consulted for research
- ✓ Provide social or historical context to the experiences of your ancestor
- ✓ Discuss how that context and other people influenced and socialized your ancestor, and how your ancestor influenced your family history
